BRICS sign agreement on telemedicine at Yugra

Members of the BRICS international IT Forum have established a telemedicine community in Khanty-Mansiysk. This group has set itself the task of creating inter-operable telemedicine systems in BRICS countries.

The Telemedicine Community set up by the BRICS international IT Forum has appealed to the Government of India, the current chair of BRICS, to support the project.

Natalia Komarova, Governor of the Khanty-Mansiysk Autonomous region Yugra, said a discussion of financing models will begin at the international economic forum in St. Petersburg in the next few days.

K.V.Kamath, President of the BRICS New Development Bank will attend the St. Petersburg international economic forum.

"I intend to introduce him to the projects of the initiative group for the creation of the Council of BRICS regions, raise the issue of creating a model of financing of the telemedicine systems in our countries," said Komarova.

Healthcare for all

Yugra, a region in northern Russian, has a large number of remote and hard to reach localities. Opening a traditional network of major medical centres in every settlement is unjustifiable. In such areas, telemedicine allows the state, the governor noted, "to provide a standardized medical service to every person, wherever he lives."

The technology permits people living in a remote village to find a medical specialist without having to travel hundreds of kilometres. The specialist can decide whether the patient needs to be sent to the hospital or whether home care would suffice.
